A WARNING YOU SHOULD HEED.

There is one danger that threatens farmers now in connection with the high price of potatoes. The price is so good that many will sell so closely that they will not have seed enough for next year.

You say: "Oh, I will not do that, I will keep plenty for seed." Some who intend to keep plenty for seed will find by spring that they have used a few more than they expected and in some instances they will lose some by freezing.

If you will only bear in mind that seed potatoes promise to be much higher than the price you are now getting, you will then see the wisdom of not selling off too close. Keep plenty of potatoes for seed and if you have an over supply you will find a ready market for them.

After a careful test covering three years, in which small potatoes were used for seed, the department of agriculture reports that the shrinkage in the crop, either in quantity or size, was so small as to be of little moment, but it was advised that such a practice would probably prove hurtful if continued for a long period of years.

In view of that fact this is the time when small potatoes should be saved for seed. The wise farmer usually saves his best seed for planting any and all crops, but conditions sometimes arise where, in the use of potatoes, the inferior ones can be safely used. This is one of the times.

One week ago today Virginia became a dry state. That condition in Virginia produced an unusual and unjust condition. Under the laws of this state wholesale liquor men can now sell whiskey to people in Virginia, but Virginia cannot return the compliment. The Old Dominion kept that feature out of her dry law. Tennessee should be just enough to take that unjust feature out of its prohibition law at the next sitting of the legislature, but there is little or no likelihood that it will be done.

The election yesterday eliminated many thousands of elective candidates and created many thousands more appointive candidates. Such are the fruits of politics.

It would be hard to find today an independent who did not vote for the winner.

ADVERTISING TO ADVANTAGE.

The writer heard this story recently and he has heard several others much like it.

The editor of a country weekly paper was asked to insert the advertising of a farmer who had some Duroc Jersey hogs to sell. The ad. was not conspicuous, but it was read. The farmer had ten hogs for sale. They were good breeding animals and he was not willing that they should be sold to the butcher. The editor had finished printing his paper but some of the out-of-the-county papers had not been mailed when the farmer telephoned in to stop the ad.

"I have sold all of the animals already. Your ad. did the work," was

FAMILY AVOIDS
SERIOUS SICKNESS

By Being Constantly Supplied With Theford's Black-Draught.

McDuff, Va.—"I suffered for several years," says Mrs. J. B. Whittaker, of this place, "with sick headache, and stomach trouble."

Ten years ago a friend told me to try Theford's Black-Draught, which I did, and I found it to be the best family medicine for young and old.

I keep Black-Draught on hand all the time now, and when my children feel a little bad, they ask me for a dose, and it does them more good than any medicine they ever tried.

We never have a long spell of sickness in our family, since we commenced using Black-Draught.

Theford's Black-Draught is purely vegetable, and has been found to regulate weak stomachs, aid digestion, relieve indigestion, colic, wind, nausea, headache, sick stomach, and similar symptoms.

It has been in constant use for more than 70 years, and has benefited more than a million people.

Your druggist sells and recommends Black-Draught. Price only 25c. Get a package to-day.

the farmer's comment.

The farmer had not realized that there was a market so close at hand. He could find out only by inserting an advertisement in the paper. Of course, the editor is glad, for it has established very friendly relations between the farmer and the paper, but the important point is not the friendship established but the fact that the hogs are sold.

BENEFITS FROM CROP ROTATION

Crop rotation helps to control weeds, insects and plant diseases. Typical examples of insect pests that may be controlled by rotation are the corn root worm and root louse. Potato scab is checked by rotating the crop.

Crop rotation should provide for keeping up the humus supply of the soil. It should provide for the growth of grass and legumes on each field.

It often saves labor. The land may be kept occupied with crops a greater part of the time.

Opportunity is given for the alternation of deep and shallow rooted crops. It may provide for a balanced removal of plant food.

Toxic or poisonous substances may be controlled.

Farming is systematized.

ONE REASON FOR LIME.

Ordinary soil contains many thousands of organisms, most of them so small that a microscope is required to see them. From the standpoint of crop production the most important of these small living bodies are the nitrogen-gathering bacteria found in the nodules on legume roots, and the nitrifying bacteria which convert the nitrogen of organic compounds into nitrates to be used directly by the plants. These organisms, when allowed to grow unmolested, produce an acid which, if allowed to accumulate, will stop the growth or entirely kill the organisms.

The best conditions for their growth can be maintained by neutralizing the acid in the soil with applications of lime.

GEN. GRAND CHAPTER O. E. S.

Next Triennial Meeting Will Be Held at Seattle, Wash., 1919.

The General Grand Chapter Order of the Eastern Star held its triennial meeting in Louisville, Ky., the last days of October. The meeting was a notable one and numerous members of the order were in attendance from this state. Mrs. Frances Haun, past grand matron, was named on a committee, that being the only honor that came to this state.

It was decided to sever relations with the grand chapter of Scotland. No reason for such action was given.

The next triennial meeting will be held in Seattle, Washington, in 1919. Other cities sought it but Seattle was the winner.

STRANGE LAW

Murderers Hired Out as Convicts by North Carolina.

By the statutes of North Carolina, convicts are hired to bidders for a desired period. The wages earned revert to the state. J. W. Slaughter, recently convicted for the murder of Thomas Weaver, was hired out by the Rockingham Commissioners in accordance with the jury's findings for a term of two years to A. L. Finch, a tobacco planter. Slaughter, who was former Chief of Police of Draper, at once left with his new employer, who will pay the county the sum of $435 before the prison term comes to an end.

The commissioners took most of the day to reach a decision. Mrs. Slaughter had put in a bid for her husband also, but the board finally decided to reject her offer because, if they accepted, Slaughter would be living at home while undergoing the penalty imposed.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Slaughter, who vainly endeavored to hire the services of her husband, occupies unique political erasement. The state constitution refuses her a vote, marriage makes her subject to her convict husband, and the courts deprive her of the man who is supposed to represent her. How much better to give her her own vote, and then nothing but her own transgressions could prevent her from the democratic right of every decent American, vote in democracy.

COMING OUR WAY

For every dollar paid to the Southern Railway by the people of the South during September, 1916, the Southern paid out in the South $1.08, according to figures announced by Comptroller A. H. Plant.

The Southern disbursed during the month for labor, material, supplies, and other purposes, $5,713,569 of which $4,948,518, or 86.61 percent, was paid to individuals and industries located in the South, this sum being $378,985 in excess of the total moneys contributed by the South for transportation purposes.

"BARBER POLE" SIGNS.

"Barber pole" signs have been painted on all Southern Railway crossing gates in further effort to attract the attention of reckless automobile drivers and so prevent accidents at crossings.

Experience has shown that many automobile drivers dash across railway tracks without regarding the "Stop, Look, and Listen" signs and some of them have even crashed through gates provided for the protection of crossings.
